B. Healthy Body, Healthy Mind

Sitting around in (6) of	the TV or computer all day makes you put on weight and feel tired. Regular physical activity (7) calories and gives you more energy. Exercise can im	prove not only your shape, but also your well-being, or your professional or academ	nic achievements.
The key to success is to take up (8)	an activity that challenges
you. If you want to be good at anything, from	om playing a musical instrument to learning a foreign language, you have to work ha	rd and practise. Sport is no different, so if you go (9) a sport yo	ou like, then there's a better chance you'll carry on with it.
Most sports build physical ability, streng	th and coordination, but team sports can teach a sense of (10)	_ play and develop leadership and other social skills. But if you can't stand the ide	a of teams, choose an individual sport, like swimming, gymnastics or weightlifting.
C. To Buy or Not to Buy?
In many parts of the world, people don't h	nave enough food and are too poor to own basic items such as a refrigerator or a	vashing machine. (11), in the richer countries, people throw aw	yay appliances that can be repaired, and change cars or computers just to have a n	nore up-to-date model.
The reason (12) th	at is quite simple. Everywhere we go, r things we don't really need, and reating the impression that those who don't, won't fit in any more.
This constant pressure to spend and cor	sume has (14) too far.
So we can understand why some people	in the rich world show their disapproval of this consumerism by deciding not to buy a	nything for a day. But what would happen if we took this idea to its logical conclusion	and everyone (15) up buying things not just for one day, but for a	a month, or even a year?
